

HOPPE-Sertos® – The clip-in connection with ball locking mechanism

Quick to install – quick to remove again

Once a door handle is installed, it generally stays put – ultimately, it comes down to producing a robust and durable connection. In commercial buildings in particular, the set must remain securely positioned on the door, even over long-term use. But what if there has been an installation error or the handle has to be removed again for some other reason? A scenario of this kind has had manufacturers tearing their hair out – because removing handles in category of use grade 4 is really not that simple.

No special tools required

Now HOPPE has developed something new: Sertos®, a clip-in connection which is not only easy to fit but can also be removed without effort. And without the need for any special tools – a conventional screwdriver is all you need! At the heart of the new technology is the ball locking mechanism, developed and manufactured by HOPPE, in the clip-in connection.

Proven high durability

But that's not all: the Sertos® connection is also extremely durable. It can survive an endurance test of one million test cycles without any functional impairment, as evidenced only recently by the PIVCERTPlus test carried out by the Velbert test institute (PIV). This means that the Sertos® sets exceed the requirements of DIN EN 1906 for category of use grade 4 by five times!

Many different designs available

HOPPE offers the Sertos® clip-in connection with ball locking mechanism in a comprehensive range of different series in both aluminium and stainless steel – including many HOPPE classics from the duraplus® product range. The range also includes series with the antimicrobial coating SecuSan® – an extremely interesting additional benefit in public buildings!
